What I think is amazing is mankind is motivating and reaching out to offer assistance to people they do not even know. First responders from all over the country banding together to help their fellow man.

It brings hope everyday to a very cynical world!

Have a terrific Tuesday!

I know - really hard to watch. Had to turn off TV yesterday, I was busy anyways.

Another opportunity to help our neighbors. I wonder if we will see an influx of people to our sunny state. Can't even imagine losing everything in one night/day.

I lived in Florida for 33 years, and even though I prefer a Hurricane to an Earthquake, because you know it's coming, it is sometimes far more devastating.

Have a great night

Warm regards,

Cindie

Dear Cindie:

Terrific news! I will put Kevin down as a yes. I know its absolutely devastating to see what is happening in Houston - its really hard to image that mother nature could be so cruel.

Yes indeed it is - but who can complain after seeing what happened in Houston TX and beyond.

Kevin will be delighted to attend. I will place on his calendar for attendance.

Thank you

Cindie

Thank you Lisa. I have printed out the invite and Kevin's has seen it.

I will let you know as to his response once he returns from his trip.

Warm regards,

Cindie
